Our studies have also found that child labour risks remain omnipresent in global supply chains throughout different sectors.

160 million children are in child labour. This accounts for approximately 1 in 10 children worldwide.

Since 2019, we have conducted about 100 assessments for 95 clients across different industries in global supply chains.

A thorough risk assessment is an important first step to map business' direct and indirect impacts on children, and to understand the needs of parent workers and children involved in its supply chain.
